Welcome

Choosing the right kind of care for you or someone you love can be a daunting and emotional task, and most people who start out on this journey feel overwhelmed and confused by the vast array of options – not to mention acronyms.

The good news is that you have what I believe is the very best resource in the state of New York for exploring the options within senior living and services.

This guide, prepared for you by us at LeadingAge New York, will help you make the best decisions for you, your family and loved ones.

We are an association of not-for-profit and government-sponsored members. Our members are mission-driven to provide the best care for you or your loved one. This guide will introduce you to the entire range of care, from housing for independent seniors to home care, which helps seniors age in place, to assisted living on up through skilled nursing and all the options along the way. We'll also introduce you to the continuing care retirement community, a campus-like setting that encompasses every level of care in one location, from independent housing to skilled nursing and allows you to access the level you need, when you need it, without leaving your community.

I strongly encourage you to contact any of our member organizations and facilities listed in this guide.

This guide is the right place to start, but I can't encourage you enough to visit the organization or service provider you're considering. Many organizations offer trial stays, so be sure to ask about that as well. In the coming pages, you'll find other questions you should ask, but don't limit yourself to those; when you're looking at something as life changing as senior living and services, every question is important.

Best wishes,

James W. Clyne Jr.
President and CEO

What is “Continuing Care”?

As used in this guide, “continuing care” refers to a wide variety of long-term care, post-acute care and senior housing services and supports. It is particularly helpful to distinguish between long-term care and post-acute care services when exploring service options.

Post-acute care is delivered on a short-term basis following a hospitalization, with the goal of returning the patient to his/her prior health and functional status. It is provided by home care agencies, nursing homes, and inpatient and outpatient rehabilitation facilities.

Long-term care, by contrast, often involves custodial care and managing chronic conditions over longer periods of time. Like post-acute care, it is often delivered by nursing homes and home care agencies. However, it involves a broad array of health care and residential services offered through Medicaid waiver programs, adult day health care programs, adult homes, enriched housing programs, assisted living facilities, hospice programs and continuing care retirement communities. It also includes social supports, such as home-delivered meals, transportation, environmental modifications, social adult day programs, and senior centers. And, it includes various types of housing that offer social supports to residents, including subsidized senior housing with service coordination, Naturally Occurring Retirement Communities (NORCs) and Neighborhood NORCs, market-rate senior housing communities and Villages.

Seniors and younger disabled people can receive both post-acute care and long-term care, and service providers often provide both types of services as well. These services can be provided in an individual's own home, in senior housing, in a community-based setting like an adult day center, or in a specialized facility like a nursing home.

The remainder of this section provides further information to help you navigate the following subjects: (1) residential living options; (2) options at home and in the community; (3) Medicaid and Medicare managed care; (4) Medicare Part D prescription drug coverage; and (5) selecting care and service options.

Residential Living Options

There are a variety of residential programs in New York State designed to care for seniors and individuals with disabilities of all ages who for many different reasons are no longer able to live safely in private residences in the community or no longer wish to do so. All of these programs offer varying degrees of assistance with activities of daily living, meals and sometimes health-related services.

1. NURSING HOMES

A nursing home, also known as a nursing facility or skilled nursing facility, provides 24-hour medical, nursing, therapy and other services to elderly individuals and persons of all ages with disabilities. These facilities are licensed by the New York State Department of Health (NYSDOH). A nursing home offers a protective, therapeutic environment for those who need rehabilitative care or can no longer live independently because of chronic physical or mental conditions that require 24-hour a day care. Nursing homes are the most intensive and, therefore, often the most expensive level of continuing care given the wide range of services they provide.

What are patient assessments and why are they important?

Before being admitted into a nursing home, the prospective resident must undergo a screening process to determine if a lower level of care would be more suitable for him/her. The screening process begins with a health care professional completing a Patient Review Instrument (PRI). The PRI is used to assess the applicant's ability to complete "activities of daily living" such as walking, bathing and using the toilet, as well as clinical conditions and the need for specialized services. This health assessment helps to identify physical, medical, social and psychological issues the applicant faces.

If the person is in the hospital and is being considered for direct transfer to a nursing home, hospital social services or discharge planning staff will assist in completing the PRI and the screening process to determine whether nursing home placement is appropriate. If the person is at home or in a community-based program, a certified home health agency should be contacted to complete the PRI. Under these circumstances, a home visit is usually necessary. It is important to give the evaluator honest, accurate and complete information during this visit.

If the individual is a Medicaid beneficiary and is enrolled in a Medicaid managed care plan (see more information on managed care below), the managed care plan will be involved in the administration of the assessment process.

Once accepted for nursing home placement, the person will also undergo a much more extensive assessment process within the nursing home using a form called the Minimum Data Set (MDS). The MDS comprehensively reviews the person's history and needs. It is a key part of the resident's overall assessment and is used to develop and maintain an individualized care plan.

Services Available

A nursing home offers a full array of personal care, dietary, therapeutic, medical, rehabilitative, social, spiritual, recreational, housekeeping and nursing services. Residents are involved in decisions about their care and receive services based on their individual needs. While many residents need care for extended periods due to chronic illness, a growing number of other patients enter a nursing home for a short stay for restorative therapy services. This may be after surgery or an accident, or to recuperate from a serious illness before returning home. These types of short-term stays are sometimes referred to as short-term rehabilitation, subacute care, post-acute care, transitional care and/or post-acute rehabilitation.

Many nursing homes also offer specialized services such as wound care, intravenous therapies, Alzheimer's/dementia care, bariatric care, dialysis services, cardio-pulmonary rehabilitation, hospice and palliative care, and respite (i.e., scheduled short-term stay) care. Some nursing homes also have specialized units or beds to care for individuals who have AIDS/HIV, are dependent on mechanical ventilators, need care for brain injuries or strokes, have neurobehavioral or neurodegenerative conditions, or are children or young adults with disabilities.

Living Arrangements

Living arrangements will vary depending upon the facility. Semi-private or private rooms are available in most facilities, with private or shared baths.

Payment

Many people incorrectly assume that the federal Medicare program will finance their long-term care needs, particularly for nursing home care. In fact, Medicare pays for only a small number of people in any nursing home setting, and only for a limited amount of time for individuals who need rehabilitation therapy or complex medical care following a hospital stay. To receive Medicare-covered services in a nursing home, an individual must meet very strict criteria including a minimum three-day qualifying inpatient stay in a hospital. Eligibility for this option should be discussed with the discharging hospital, the admitting nursing home or the local department of social services or office for the aging.

On average, about 75 percent of the residents in New York's nursing homes have their care covered by the Medicaid program. Medicaid is a joint federal-state program administered at the local level by local departments of social services to help pay for medical care for those who cannot afford to do so on their own. Medicaid beneficiaries qualify for the program by meeting certain income and asset standards.

The State has instituted changes that are, over time, requiring many Medicaid beneficiaries to enroll in Medicaid managed care plans to receive their services. Medicaid beneficiaries who need over 120 days of Medicaid long-term care services in the community will be asked to choose a managed care plan, similar to choosing an insurance program. Failing to make a choice, the individual may be automatically enrolled in a plan. Once a person is enrolled in managed care, the managed care plan will coordinate and supervise the person's care along with coordinating the payment for services, including the full array of long-term care services the individual may need. Nursing home care is among the services covered under Medicaid managed care.

Often, a resident enters a nursing home and initially pays with his or her own money. When that money is mostly exhausted (also known as "spend-down"), the individual can apply to Medicaid for coverage. Spend-down laws allow the person's non-institutionalized spouse (if there is one) to keep a house, a car and a reasonable amount of assets. In other words, community spouses do not need to “impoverish” themselves by spending down all their money to obtain Medicaid coverage for their spouses who need services. Since these laws are complicated and subject to change, LeadingAge New York suggests discussing them with the admitting facility or the local department of social services. The local department of social services can also advise the individual whether he or she is required to enroll in a Medicaid managed care plan.

Questions

When deciding on a nursing home for services, consider asking the following questions:

- Is the nursing home well maintained, pleasing and cheerful?
- Does the staff seem friendly, caring and accommodating to residents and visitors?
- Do the residents appear comfortable, well-groomed and involved in meaningful activities?
- Does the facility conduct resident and staff satisfaction surveys and if so, is this information available for review?
- What are the findings from the most recent state inspection, and can you discuss them with a representative from the facility?
- Are amenities such as private rooms, cable service for individual televisions, and private telephones available? At what cost?
- What activity programs and special events are held at the facility or off-site?
- What religious/spiritual programs are offered?
- How many physicians are on staff? Do I have a choice between the facility's staff physician and my personal physician?
- Does the facility have staff providing occupational, physical and speech therapy?
- Should hospitalization become necessary, which hospital does the facility use?
- Which Medicaid and Medicare managed care plans does the facility have agreements with?
- How many residents are under the care of one nurse aide on the day shift? What staff coverage is available on evenings, nights and weekends?
- Who coordinates admissions? How are the rooms assigned? Is there an orientation for new residents?
- Is there a family council to provide input into the kinds of programs and problems the facility may have? How often does the residents' council meet?
- What may residents bring with them? Is there room for a favorite chair, photographs and wall hangings?

2. ADULT CARE FACILITIES AND ASSISTED LIVING

Adult Care Facilities (ACFs) and assisted living serve individuals who cannot or do not want to remain at home, but do not need continuous nursing care as would be provided in a nursing home. These facilities provide assistance, while emphasizing the resident's autonomy and independence. It is not surprising that these options have become so popular since they offer “home-like” settings and can be less expensive than some alternatives. In addition to providing long-term residential services, many assisted living facilities also allow short-term stays to give family caregivers a break, called “respite” care.

There are several categories of licensure within the umbrella terms of “ACF” and “assisted living”, and they all provide a similar package of services. Some have additional licensure or certification to provide specialized services or accept Medicaid benefits. All are licensed and overseen by the NYSDOH.

Two types of ACFs that typically serve seniors are adult homes and enriched housing programs. Both help with activities of daily living, assistance with medication administration, monitoring, supervision, case management, activities, and housekeeping. The biggest difference is that enriched housing is more of an apartment model, with a kitchen, while an adult home room does not have a kitchen. Technically, the adult home has higher staffing requirements and must provide three meals a day, but the enriched housing model has evolved so that most operate much like adult homes, with the layout of the living space being the most significant difference. Either model may have shared or private rooms.

Services Available in All ACFs

- Nutritious meals;
- Hospitality services including housekeeping, laundry and sometimes transportation;
- Case management;
- Monitoring and supervision;
- Activities and recreational opportunities;
- Personal care services, including help with grooming, dressing and bathing; and
- Medication assistance and supervision.

Some ACFs may have additional licensure, which is where the term “assisted living” comes in. There are two categories of licensure for assisted living in New York State – the Assisted Living Residence (ALR) and the Assisted Living Program (ALP). This additional licensure enables ACFs to offer additional and specialized services, as discussed below.

Assisted Living Residences

ALRs provide the same package of services that an ACF does, but this licensure allows them to use the term “assisted living.” Some ALRs are also approved by the NYSDOH to provide specialized services for people with Alzheimer's Disease or other cognitive impairments, and these are called Special Needs Assisted Living Residences (SNALRs).

These facilities have specialized programming, services, staffing and environment designed for people with these special needs. People with dementia or Alzheimer's Disease can live in "basic" assisted living or even an ACF, but SNALRs are for those who need a specialized environment to ensure their needs are met.

With additional certification, ALRs can also allow residents to "age in place". These Enhanced Assisted Living Residences (EALRs) can retain residents who would otherwise have to go to a higher level of care such as a nursing home. The EALR can provide or arrange for nursing care and other additional services in the facility as a resident's needs increase. These added services can include things like getting help with walking up and down stairs, assistance with transferring, help with other activities of daily living and nursing services. Most people who need 24-hour nursing or medical care will need a higher level of care, however. EALRs may be approved to provide enhanced care to all of their residents, or only a portion of their residents. In addition, these facilities can determine what types of "enhanced" services they will provide, or what resident needs they will be able to meet. This is spelled out in the admission agreement, and the facility should be able to describe their services to an interested consumer and let them know how many enhanced residents they can serve.

Both Special Needs and Enhanced ALRs provide the basic services outlined above under "Services Available in All ACFs", but also meet additional safety and staffing requirements. ALRs can be certified to provide Special Needs and/or Enhanced services, or simply provide "basic" ALR services.

Assisted Living Program

The ALP is the only assisted living option in New York State that can accept Medicaid as payment, although ALPs also accept individuals who can pay out of their own funds.

Combining the services of an ACF and a home care agency, the ALP can care for people who are medically eligible for nursing home placement but can manage in a less medically intensive, lower cost setting. The ALP provides all of the services of an ACF, but also provides or arranges for personal emergency response services, nursing, therapies, certain medical supplies and equipment, home health services, and the case management services of a registered professional nurse. The ALP can retain people whose needs exceed those that can be met in an ACF, however certain circumstances may require the resident to seek a different level of care. For example, if the resident becomes bedfast, requires continual nursing or medical care, or endangers the safety of the resident or other residents, he or she would not be appropriate for the ALP.

Payment for ACFs and Assisted Living

Medicare does not cover assisted living or ACF services. Currently, there are limited options for low-income individuals. In New York, only the ALP is covered by Medicaid. Some facilities accept Supplemental Security Income (SSI) benefits as payment, but these facilities are dwindling in number since the SSI payment is well below what it actually costs a facility to care for residents. Some veterans or spouses of veterans may be eligible for certain benefits which can assist in paying for ACF or assisted living services. In addition, some long-term care insurance policies will cover assisted living. These options should certainly be explored, though individual circumstances and policies will differ. Most often, residents and their families pay for assisted living out of their own funds. Facilities have different ways of charging for services, and any ACF or assisted living facility should be able to explain their charges and the services they cover.

At present, Medicaid managed care does not cover assisted living services, but this may change as time goes on. Managed care may cover services provided to participants residing in assisted living or ACFs, such as home care. When this arrangement occurs, the facility will coordinate services with the managed care plan.

Questions

When deciding on assisted living or ACF for services, consider asking the following questions:

- Is assisted living or an ACF appropriate, based on an assessment of my physical, financial, mental and lifestyle needs? If needed, professional help is available to assist with this process. Ask your health care provider for information.
- What are the criteria for admission to the facility you are considering? How is the need for services determined?
- What services are included in the basic plan and what services are available for an additional fee?
- What is the dining environment like?
- What religious/spiritual programs are offered?
- Does the administrator seem to know the residents and interact with them?
- Are the staff friendly and professional?
- There are several different types of assisted living. If you have specialized needs, ask how the facility will make sure your needs are addressed.
- Can this facility meet your anticipated future needs? If you have a degenerative disease, for example, will you be able to stay or would you have to move on to another setting?
- What happens if you deplete your financial resources? Will you have to move to another facility?
- Are there any other circumstances under which you could have to leave the facility?
- If you have long-term care insurance, Medicaid, SSI and/or Veteran's benefits, does the facility accept them for payment?
- What sort of relationships does the facility have with nursing homes, hospitals and home care agencies, should you need more care or a different type of care?

3. SENIOR HOUSING

Senior housing facilities – which can go by other terms such as “independent living” or “independent residences” or “senior apartments” – are typically building complexes comprised of multiple apartments, detached homes or other building types for independent living for adults aged 55+ (note: minimum ages can be higher than 55, and some facilities must admit younger disabled individuals). These facilities provide a secure, residential environment, but do not directly provide the type of extensive health care services associated with nursing homes or assisted living. Those services may be available through separate arrangements with home care agencies or other providers. Senior housing offers privacy and independent living in buildings that are safe and well maintained. Many are architecturally designed to address some of the physical limitations that growing older may bring. For example, bathrooms may be equipped with handrails and grab bars or electrical outlets placed within easier reach. Many are equipped with 24-hour emergency call systems.

Services Available

Senior housing may be provided in a stand-alone facility or as part of a retirement community that offers other services. Many senior housing facilities also offer or can arrange for a variety of supportive services such as service coordination, meals, transportation, housekeeping, social activities, counseling, recreational programs, daily visits or telephone reassurances.

Payment

Monthly rents vary depending on the size of the housing unit, the location, the services offered and the income group the building is designed to serve. “Subsidized housing” (which can also be referred to as “low-income housing”, “HUD housing” or “income-restricted housing”) is a type of senior housing that requires applicants to meet certain income qualifications to be considered for an apartment. Subsidized senior housing is overseen by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) and the New York State Homes and Community Renewal (HCR).

“Market-rate” senior housing is not subsidized by the government and is open to individuals whose incomes enable them to pay the monthly rents and any entrance fee that are typical for that geographic region and type of facility.

Questions

When deciding on senior housing for services, consider asking the following questions:

- Is the facility located close to family, doctors, pharmacy, grocery, shopping, houses of worship and public transportation?
- Are there entrance fees?
- What is the monthly rent? How much does it increase each year?
- Are there other charges for services or meals?

- Does the facility have a service coordinator on-site or otherwise arrange for coordination of health services and other supports?
- Does the facility offer transportation services or coordinate transportation for residents?
- What types of floor plans does the facility offer? Can they be adapted as residents “age in place?”
- What is the facility’s policy when you need more health care services?
- What happens if you live in market-rate housing and you deplete your financial resources? Will you have to move to another facility?

4. CONTINUING CARE RETIREMENT COMMUNITIES

Continuing care retirement communities (CCRCs) are unique because they offer a full range of living arrangements for their residents – independent housing, assisted living/ACF and nursing home – all within one community. This arrangement allows a person to enter the community as an independent housing resident and, as his/her needs change, the services provided in the CCRC can change so that the person does not have to move out of the community. Within CCRCs, the independent housing options typically range from small and large apartments to townhouses and cottages. Assisted living options can include Enhanced programs which allow residents to remain in that level of care longer as their needs increase, as well as Special Needs programs that offer memory care services.

In addition to providing living arrangements and a range of health-related services and supports, CCRCs also provide their residents with the amenities and comforts of a community. Residents often have access to health clubs, swimming pools, conference centers, medical suites, dedicated worship centers, convenience stores, beauty salons and a choice of dining options. CCRCs host organized social events, provide recreational activities and offer transportation to venues outside of the community. They may also offer guest quarters for visiting family members and friends.

CCRCs provide housing and health-related services for their residents under an agreement effective for the life of the resident or for a specific period. There are three main types of agreements or contracts within CCRCs. “Type A” contracts, also known as “life care” agreements, include housing, residential services and amenities, and unlimited long-term care without substantial increases in periodic payments. Modified (“Type B”) contracts cover housing, residential services and amenities, and limited nursing home care without any substantial increases in periodic payments. Fee-for-Service (“Type C”) contracts include housing, residential services and amenities. Residents are guaranteed access to health care services by paying prevailing rates. Essentially, residents only pay for health care services used.

Payment

Residents pay an entrance fee – most often from the sale of their home – and monthly charges out of their own funds and/or from long-term care insurance benefits. In exchange, they have guaranteed access to the entire range of services provided in the community. CCRCs are an attractive alternative to many seniors, since they provide security in knowing that the resident's future health care and other needs will be met by the same organization, and that their monthly fee will remain predictable even if the level of services needed changes. This allows a resident to more readily budget for the cost of services over time.

Questions

When deciding on a particular CCRC for services, consider asking the following questions:

- What types of contracts does the CCRC offer (i.e., life care, modified, fee-for-service), and what are the entrance and monthly fees associated with each?
- What are my current living expenses vs. the costs of living at the retirement community?
- Is there a policy that allows a refund of the entrance fee if I leave the community?
- How long has the CCRC been in business? How about the organization that operates it?
- What services are included in the monthly fee? What services are offered for an additional charge?
- What kind of health care is available on-site (physicians, dentists, clinic, etc.)?
- What activity programs, educational opportunities and transportation services are available?
- What opportunities are there for involvement through resident councils and committees?

Options at Home and in the Community

A variety of programs are designed to help older adults remain in their own homes and/or to help family members in coping with their relative's chronic illness or disabilities. These services may be needed on a short-term or long-term basis. While many types of home and community-based services exist for older adults, not all are available in every community.

New York State is making managed long-term care (MLTC) the primary care management model for individuals who are both Medicaid and Medicare eligible and need community-based long-term care services for 120 days or more. Medicaid beneficiaries aged 21+ who need such care are required to enroll in an MLTC plan. Please see the next section for further information on MLTC.

In-home and community services offered in New York State include home care, adult day services (which include social adult day care and adult day health care), hospice care, respite care, home-delivered meals and senior centers. Again, local availability of these services can vary by community and region.

1. HOME CARE

Regulated by the NYSDOH, home care is delivered in New York through Certified Home Health Agencies (CHHAs), Licensed Home Care Services Agencies (LHCSAs), and Consumer-Directed Personal Assistance Services (CDPAS). CHHAs provide skilled nursing services, physical, occupational and speech therapy, and home health aide services which provide help with activities of daily living (such as laundry, shopping, housekeeping, personal hygiene and meal preparation). LHCSAs can deliver personal care services to individuals directly or through contracts with CHHAs or managed care plans. Rather than using aides and nurses hired by a CHHA or LHCSA, Medicaid beneficiaries may also opt to hire, train, supervise, and fire their own “personal assistants” through CDPAS programs.

Home care helps individuals who have long-term needs related to a chronic illness or disability, or short-term nursing or therapy needs after a hospitalization. Home care is often an important part of assisted living services, and is provided in senior housing settings as well as in individual homes. The service is also discussed in those sections of this introduction.

Individuals who do not qualify for Medicaid may access personal care through the New York State Office for the Aging’s (NYSOFA’s) Expanded In-Home Services for the Elderly Program (EISEP) and Community Services for the Elderly (CSE) program. EISEP and CSE also provide an array of other community-based services including case management, respite, home-delivered meals, transportation, housekeeping and chore services, and minor home repairs.

2. MEDICAID WAIVER SERVICES

The Traumatic Brain Injury (TBI) and Nursing Home Transition and Diversion (NHTD) waiver programs serve Medicaid beneficiaries who have sustained TBIs and seniors who are eligible for nursing home placement with cost-effective home and community-based services so they can live and be cared for in the most integrated community based setting as possible. The NYSDOH oversees the TBI and NHTD waiver programs, and contracts with “Regional Resource Development Centers” to manage these programs throughout the State.

Medicaid beneficiaries who are enrolled in these waiver programs are provided with an individualized well-coordinated plan of care and services to assist them in transitioning to life at home or in the community. Covered services include assistive technology, environmental modifications, transportation, supervision and cueing, transition services, counseling, independent living skills, behavioral interventions and support services, structured day programs and more. Participants may come from a nursing home or other institution or choose to participate in the waiver to prevent institutionalization. Services may be considered when informal supports, local, state and federally funded services and Medicaid State Plan services are not sufficient to assure the health and welfare of the person in the community, or when waiver services are a more efficient use of Medicaid funds.

3. ADULT DAY SERVICES

In New York State, adult day services come in two forms – a medical model called “Adult Day Health Care” (ADHC) and a social model called “Social Adult Day Care” (SADC). Adult day services programs offer a safe, secure, stimulating environment for people whose family circumstances allow them to remain in their homes in the evenings (and possibly on weekends), but who need some sort of supervision during the daytime. Adult day services are very appropriate for a person whose needs are ordinarily met by their own family members or friends, especially when those people may work outside the home during the day but are generally at home in the evenings and on weekends.

SADC is oriented toward the social aspects of life and may include games, memory orientation exercises, music, dancing and reading in a safe and supervised environment. These programs also provide a meal, some help with activities of daily living (such as mobility and grooming), and offer supervised field trips and special events. These programs may be located in the community, or in ACFs (see the section above on “Adult Care Facilities and Assisted Living”). SADC programs are overseen by NYSOFA. Funding sources include contracts with managed long-term care plans, grant funding from the local offices for the aging, and out-of-pocket payments.

ADHC has a strong medical component. These programs are staffed by a number of professionals including a registered nurse able to conduct assessments, manage medications and perform medical tasks. These programs must be sponsored by a nursing home or a hospital, and provide social activities in addition to medical services. They are required to provide physical, occupational and speech therapy to people who need these services. In addition, they provide a full range of personal care services (from some help to total assistance with mobility, eating, dressing, bathing, grooming and toileting), social services, case management and at least one meal per visit. ADHC programs must provide or arrange transportation to and from the program. These programs are regulated by the NYSDOH. Funding sources include fee-for-service Medicaid, contracts with the Veterans Administration, Medicaid managed care plans as well as out-of-pocket payments.

4. HOSPICE AND PALLIATIVE CARE

A hospice is an agency licensed by the NYSDOH to provide medical, spiritual and emotional care to individuals with life-limiting illnesses with a prognosis of six months or less to live if the disease process proceeds on its expected course. Many hospices have added “palliative care” to extend services to more people who could benefit from receiving health care treatment to prevent or reduce pain and suffering earlier in their illness or disease process. Hospice and palliative care can be provided in the home, a special hospice facility, hospital or a nursing home. Hospice also provides supportive services to the individual’s family.

5. RESPITE

Respite service provides infrequent and temporary overnight care for ill or disabled older adults for a few days or weeks. It gives caregivers (family members or friends) a short break from the stresses and responsibilities of providing constant care, enabling the caregiver to maintain a normal routine. Respite care is normally offered for three consecutive hours or longer in a day, and up to six weeks in any calendar year. Respite can be delivered in a variety of settings, including assisted living facilities, nursing homes, adult day services programs and a home in the community.

Respite services are generally in short supply and should be reserved as early as possible. Generally speaking, respite services are overseen by the NYSDOH.

6. HOME-DELIVERED MEALS

Home-delivered meals, often called “meals-on-wheels,” are provided to older adults who are unable to prepare their own well-balanced meals either on a temporary or long-term basis. Often these individuals are recovering from a recent illness, surgery or other condition, which impairs their independence, creating a situation in which they become nutritionally at-risk at a time when proper nutrition is especially important. In New York State, Area Agencies on Aging provide home-delivered meals with funding from federal and state governments, local funds and participant contributions. Individual participants may use Food Stamps, cash or checks as their contribution.

7. SENIOR CENTERS

Senior centers offer a broad spectrum of services and activities such as social and educational services, health, nutrition, and a community resource for information and recreational activities. These centers are offered by various community groups, churches and local governments. Some senior centers are regulated by the NYSOFA and the NYS Office of Children and Family Services. These centers must provide information and referral to other needed services, group activities, counseling and outreach. Participants must be at least 60 years of age and be income-qualified.

8. NATURALLY OCCURRING RETIREMENT COMMUNITIES AND VILLAGES

Naturally Occurring Retirement Communities (NORCs) are neighborhoods or buildings in which many of the residents are older adults who have either aged in place or have migrated to these communities with the intention of remaining there. NORCs support aging-in-place and improved health outcomes by offering preventive health and wellness activities, case management services, classes and educational activities, trips and volunteer opportunities. NORC programs are public/private partnerships between the State, local departments for the aging, the housing entity, local community service providers and NORC residents themselves.

Villages are grassroots, self-governing, self-supporting consolidators of services within apartment buildings, housing complexes and neighborhoods that offer their members access to vetted, discounted providers and volunteers for any service they might want or need; healthy living options; and organized programs, seminars, trips and other social activities to support connectedness and friendships.

Payment

The cost of in-home and community-based services varies depending on the type of program and amount of services needed. Medicare, Medicaid, long-term care insurance, private insurance, veteran's programs and State/local offices for the aging are potential payment sources for home and community-based services. Among the services identified in this section, Medicare covers home care (which must include nursing care or therapies) only on a short-term basis following a hospital stay, as well as hospice care. Medicaid may cover several of these services over longer periods of time, primarily through managed care plans. Private insurance policies have specific criteria for what services are covered, for how long, and under what circumstances. Check with your insurer for more information.

Most of the other services above are available to people out of their own funds. Many localities offer programs through their offices for the aging for individuals with low-incomes including EISEP, CSE, SADC, home-delivered meals, senior centers and NORC supportive service programs. Some of these services, such as home-delivered meals or respite, may also be covered by Medicaid under certain circumstances. Local programs, churches and private sector agencies may provide additional supportive services and help with the costs. For further information, check with your local social services department or office for the aging.

Questions

When deciding on in-home and community-based services, consider asking the following questions:

- What are the credentials of staff providing the services? Sometimes people hire people informally to help take care of some of their daily needs. Bear in mind that hiring through a licensed or certified agency provides important consumer protections such as training, criminal history record checks and insurance.
- Is the community service provider accredited by a national organization or formally connected to an existing health care provider such as a nursing home, hospital or retirement community?
- What sort of back up or additional support can family members or friends provide or arrange to make sure the person can remain in the community safely?
- What specific services are provided and at what cost? What services are covered by insurance, and for how long? Are there more appropriate and less costly alternatives available?
- What happens when services are discontinued? Does the provider help the individual to access other services, if warranted?

Medicaid and Medicare Managed Care

“Managed care” is a term used to describe a health insurance plan or health care system that coordinates the provision, quality and cost of care for its enrolled members. In general, when you enroll in a managed care plan, you select a primary care practitioner, a doctor who will be responsible for coordinating your health care. In most cases, you are expected to select health care providers from the managed care plan’s network of professionals, continuing care providers and hospitals. There are several different types of Medicaid, Medicare and commercial managed care programs offered in New York State.

Managed care plans pay the health care providers directly, so enrollees do not have to pay out-of-pocket for covered services or submit claim forms for care received from the plan’s network of providers. However, some managed care plans can require co-pays paid directly to the provider at the time of service.

A variety of plans provide coverage of long-term care and post-acute care for individuals who are Medicare and/or Medicaid eligible in New York State:

- Medicare Advantage plans cover only Medicare benefits (including post-acute care) plus certain supplemental benefits, but most often do not cover long-term care services. They include both standard plans and the “special needs plans” that serve residents of nursing homes, beneficiaries who require a nursing home level of care, beneficiaries with chronic diseases, and individuals who are eligible for both Medicare and Medicaid. Medicare beneficiaries may elect to receive their benefits from Medicare Advantage plans but are not required to do so.

- Managed Long Term Care plans cover only Medicaid benefits – currently nursing home, home care, adult day health care, other long-term care services, optometry, dental, and podiatry services. Medicaid beneficiaries who are also Medicare eligible and need over 120 days of Medicaid long-term care services in the community are expected to choose an MLTC plan to receive their Medicaid services.
- Mainstream Medicaid Managed Care plans cover almost all Medicaid benefits, including long-term care services, for Medicaid beneficiaries who are under age 65 or otherwise ineligible for Medicare. Most Medicaid beneficiaries who are not Medicare eligible are required to choose a mainstream Medicaid managed care plan to receive their Medicaid services.
- Programs of All Inclusive Care for the Elderly (PACE) plans integrate Medicare and Medicaid benefits under a single plan for individuals age 55 or older who require a nursing home level of care. PACE programs directly provide medical, therapy, and social services primarily in the program's health center, supplemented by in-home and other services as needed. Individuals who are eligible for both Medicare and Medicaid may elect to receive their benefits from a PACE plan but are not required to do so.
- Medicaid Advantage Plus (MAP) plans also cover both Medicare and Medicaid benefits. Individuals who are eligible for both Medicare and Medicaid may elect to receive their benefits from a MAP plan but are not required to do so.

Managed care enrollees are generally assigned a care coordinator and use a team that may include physicians, therapists, nurses, social workers and home health aides to plan, provide and coordinate all needed services. Transportation to necessary medical services is typically part of the service package. Most organizations encourage the person and their family to be a part of the care planning process.

For each Medicaid and/or Medicare enrollee, the plans receive a fixed monthly premium which is used to provide a package of services tailored to an individual's needs, including services that traditional Medicaid and/or Medicare may not provide. Compared to traditional Medicaid and Medicare, services are typically more coordinated and more customized, while out-of-pocket expenses are usually lower.

PACE and MAP plans combine Medicaid and Medicare services, while MLTC and mainstream Medicaid managed care plans provide only Medicaid services and help to coordinate Medicare services (if applicable) for the enrollee. Therefore, it is important to review and understand the scope of services that each type of plan offers. PACE participants must be at least 55 years old, while other plans enroll individuals as young as 18 years old.

Medicare Part D – Prescription Drug Coverage

In January 2006, Medicare began offering prescription drug coverage. Generally referred to as Medicare Part D (“Part D”), the program is an optional benefit. Anyone eligible for Medicare, regardless of income or health status, may enroll. Medicare eligible individuals must make a choice to enroll in Part D by selecting a Part D-approved prescription drug plan (PDP) offered in New York.

Some special circumstances to consider include:

- Enrollment in the Part D program is automatic and mandatory for Medicaid beneficiaries who are also Medicare eligible;
- Medicare eligible individuals enrolled in the New York State Elderly Pharmaceutical Insurance Coverage (EPIC) program are required to enroll in Part D, which will then be the primary insurer with EPIC providing secondary coverage;
- Individuals enrolled in Medicare Advantage or HMO managed care plans will likely be required to participate in the PDP offered by their managed care plan; and
- Individuals who already have prescription drug coverage from their employer/union should confer with their benefit plan manager about enrolling in Part D and its potential impact on their private insurance coverage.

Individuals deciding to enroll in Part D will need to carefully decide among a wide variety of PDPs, offering varying levels of benefits, cost-sharing (premiums, deductibles and co-payments) and formularies (which drugs are covered). There are also additional benefits available through the Low-Income Subsidy, which provides low-income seniors with help to meet cost-sharing requirements.

Individuals are generally eligible to enroll in Part D when they first become Medicare eligible or during the annual open enrollment period, which usually occurs sometime during Nov. and Dec. of each year. Individuals may incur a premium penalty if they fail to enroll when they first become Medicare eligible. Other special enrollment periods may also apply.

For more details on enrolling in Medicare Part D, individuals should refer to the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services at: www.medicare.gov. More details on the Low-Income Subsidy are available from the Social Security Administration at: www.socialsecurity.gov. Details on EPIC and Part D are available from the NYSOFA at: <https://aging.ny.gov/programs/medicare-and-health-insurance>. The Part D enrollment process can be complicated. Seniors and those assisting them in the process should carefully research all the options. An additional resource that can provide free counseling and assistance to seniors regarding Part D is the Medicare Rights Center at: www.medicarerights.org/.

Selecting Care and Service Options

For all levels of care other than independent senior housing, it is important to follow several steps that help determine which type of care is most suitable. If the person is in a hospital, the social services department or a discharge planner will recommend a level of care at discharge. If it is a nursing home, a patient review instrument (PRI) will be completed. The PRI is discussed in more detail in the “nursing home” section of this guide.

Speak with your medical professional and be honest about how much help is needed with activities of daily living and any injuries or health conditions. Using these activities as a guide, the medical professional will be able to recommend a level of care. You can then use this guide and the New York Connects program (<https://aging.ny.gov/ny-connects-your-link-long-term-services-and-supports> or dial 800-342-9871) to obtain information on local service providers.

Few New Yorkers realize that if they become unable to make their own health care decisions, family members or loved ones have no authority to step in and speak on their behalf unless they have filed a health care proxy. When a person enters a hospital, generally they are asked to complete a health care proxy. However, if there is no hospital stay involved, an individual can access the form and instructions on the NYSDOH website at <https://www.health.ny.gov/forms/#H> or from an attorney. Make sure the person you appoint understands your wishes regarding extended health care measures that should be used on your behalf. Those measures include the use of ventilators, artificial nutrition, hydration or cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

Also connected with a health care proxy is a “do not resuscitate” order. This means you do not want any medical personnel to attempt to use medical technology or techniques to revive you if a medical emergency occurs. Two different forms of do not resuscitate orders are posted on the NYSDOH website at: <https://www.health.ny.gov/forms/#D>.

New York's not-for-profit continuing care providers have one objective: To provide the highest quality and most compassionate care to the people they serve. At a time when continuing care is under intense scrutiny, not-for-profit organizations are consistently providing more hands-on care and developing new, more creative ways to meet the needs of their residents.

LeadingAge New York members emphasize that nothing substitutes for a personal visit to a facility or program you are considering. During such visits, you can observe factors that may influence your choice. For example, you will be able to view on a first-hand basis the interaction between the staff and the individuals receiving services, as well as familiarize yourself with the amenities and routines of the facility or program.

We encourage you to take notes during or immediately following your visit and review them prior to narrowing down your choices. Ask to meet the administrator, manager, program director, director of nursing, director of social work, director of physical therapy, director of dietary services, and anyone else you think might make a difference in your life. Under each section of care defined earlier in this guide, we have provided a helpful checklist of factors to consider when making your choice.

Keep it Personal

Personal preferences are critical when selecting a post-acute, long-term care or senior services provider. Make sure the types of services, activities and environment are suitable to your needs. Discuss your hobbies and interests and ask if there will be activities or events available that tie in well with what you like to do.

Look Around

Look at the people living in the facility or receiving the services. Are they well-groomed and occupied with different activities? If it is a facility that offers dining services, observe a mealtime to see how the food is presented. Unless you are on a restricted diet, ask to taste some of the food. Look at the living or program space. Are the common areas clean, comfortable and attractively decorated? Does the staff seem friendly and interested in the services being provided?

Ask Questions

Don't think that your concern is "silly" or "minor." It's better to clarify any questions you have before making a major life decision such as this. Now is not the time to be timid about asking questions! If you are looking at a nursing home, adult home, enriched housing program or assisted living facility, ask to see the most recent inspection report or survey. These should be readily available. Ask questions about any "deficiencies" that may have been cited by the inspecting team. You have a right to know the results of those inspections.

Understand the Impact of COVID-19

The COVID-19 pandemic has had a major impact on how continuing care services are accessed and provided. Your ability as a prospective resident to visit a facility or community and observe what it offers and how it operates may be limited by government-imposed restrictions on visitation. Similarly, an existing resident of a facility may be affected by restrictions on visitation, dining services and group activities. In making decisions about residing in a facility or community and determining how the pandemic may affect you as a resident, it's important to ask questions about how the provider's services may be affected by COVID-19, whether and how "remote visits" to the facility or community are possible, and how communications with family members and friends are accommodated.

LeadingAge New York and its members wish you success in finding the perfect provider to meet your needs.
