Think Ebola: Be Prepared to Safely Assess Patients for Ebola Disease

CDC is responding to an outbreak of Ebola disease affecting areas of the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), South Sudan and Uganda. To date, no cases of Ebola disease have been confirmed in the United States because of this outbreak.

Healthcare facilities and providers should review the Think Ebola factsheet and be prepared to assess and identify patients who have risk factors for Ebola disease.

NEW! July 8, 2026 Updated Guidance: CDC's Core Elements of Outpatient Antibiotic Stewardship – Improved antibiotic prescribing is critical to effectively treat infections, protect patients from harms caused by unnecessary antibiotic use, and combat antimicrobial resistance. In 2016, CDC first released the Core Elements of Outpatient Antibiotic Stewardship to improve antibiotic prescribing practices across outpatient settings. Since then, healthcare delivery has become increasingly consolidated within health systems. The updated Core Elements places greater emphasis on the role of health systems in outpatient stewardship, while including practical strategies that can be tailored to support stewardship efforts in any outpatient setting.

Health systems play a central role in developing, expanding, and sustaining outpatient stewardship programs across their networks. The Core Elements provide a flexible, evidence-based framework that health systems and independent practices can adapt to improve antibiotic prescribing across outpatient settings. The updated Core Elements also includes a practical assessment tool to help facilities evaluate stewardship efforts, identify gaps, and monitor progress, along with considerations and strategies for stewardship activities in specific settings including telemedicine, dental clinics, and dialysis facilities.
