Monroe Community Hospital's Simulation Center Wins LeadingAge NY Innovation of the Year Award

ROCHESTER, NY — Monroe Community Hospital (MCH), the 17th largest skilled nursing facility in the nation and the largest in New York State, is proud to announce that its groundbreaking Simulation Center has been awarded the 2024 Innovation of the Year Award by LeadingAge New York. This prestigious recognition celebrates forward-thinking programs and services at not-for-profit long-term care providers across the state.

“We’ve invested heavily, with support from the county and state, to create innovative and real-life learning experiences for our staff — and we’re already seeing that investment enhance the care provided to our residents,” said Alyssa Tallo, Executive Health Director at MCH. “We are honored that LeadingAge NY has recognized our work to transform training, and we remain committed to providing the highest quality care to those we serve.”

The Simulation Center, which opened during the summer of 2024, has transformed staff training at MCH. The center features cutting-edge simulation technology, including two responsive mannequins in a semi-private room that allow staff to practice real-time scenarios in a safe, controlled environment. Another dedicated space allows teams to review recorded sessions and discuss performance improvements.

Nearly 450 total employees, both clinical and non-clinical staff, have received training in the Simulation Center on topics ranging from infection control and enhanced barrier precautions to contact cleaning, and more with additional training programs currently in development.

The center was made possible by an $878,000 grant from the New York State Increasing Training Capacity program and support from the County of Monroe.
